The middle so badly that the South formed its own party, and some states seem willing to let elect Dewey, rather than let Truman stay in the White House.

But the Republicans, confident of victory, aren't going to join the States Righters, and the South-erners aren't going to vote Republican. And, even if the Solid South did swing over, the "liberals" aren't in shape to come into the Democratic Party under Truman. They, too, are split down the middle. Their extreme left is playing the Communist game in Walling's Progressive Party, their right probably will vote for Truman only because there isn't any other place to go.

This could be the beginning of a split-up into a lot of minority parties, out of which would come presidential governments headed by presidents elected by Congress. That seems doubtful, but it is even more doubtful if anywhere in the present multitude of splinter groups—there is the making of any permanent conservative-versus-liberal party alignment.

It is not known when or where rug making originated.

Isabel Wilson arrived at Police Headquarters a bit breathlessly in response to Lieutenant Talent's invitation. She used only the edge of the left chair beside his desk, and her teeth fretted her trembling lips.

"You've arranged at the bunk, Miss Wilson, to have the remainder of the day off?" Talent queried.

"Are you familiar in Clifton?" "Well, I've been out there often doing Mr. Sterling's work, during the last month when he didn't feel able to come down."

"That's fine. After all, it is to be your house, isn't it, as part of the residue of his estate?"

"Truly, that's embarrassing to me, Lieutenant. I can't account for Mr. Sterling doing that."

"Nor he had no near kin ... no natural heirs I imagine he was glad to show his appreciation of your long, loyal service."

"Miss Wilson, at the time his wife was ... when she died ... did Mr. Sterling turn over any special duties to you?"

"There was something he mailed you from Edgerton Country. Club that morning, wasn't there?"

"Some fine material he had with him, yes." Miss Wilson's fingers tightened their hold on the arms of her chair.

"Do you recall returning that material to him?" Talent asked.

"Yes, I returned it."

"When? In what way?"

"Miss Wilson wet her lips. 'Well he phoned me on Saturday morning to meet him at the florist, to help select flowers for the funeral, and he suggested that I bring that material with me.'

"Just suggested?"

"Really, Lieutenant, this is difficult for me."

"It has a definite purpose, Miss Wilson, so try to be up. You returned the material to Mr. Sterling at the florist?"

"Yes, I gave it to him. There was no comment."

"Thank you. Then what did you do for him?"

"Just a simple errand. He gave me a package to deliver and I was to pick up a roll of newspapers for him."

"To whom ... and from whom?"

"To a Mr. Davenport at the Crosstown Hotel, and he gave me the roll of newspapers."

"What did Mr. Sterling do with his desk. I doubt that he ever looked at them."

"Do you know what was in the package you delivered?"

"Miss Wilson brows gathered. 'Certainly not, Lieutenant.'"

"Talent smiled. 'You must please try to be patient with me, Miss Wilson,' he said. 'Now, you remember the name Davenport and the Crosstown Hotel just from that one instance, do you?'"

"No, that isn't correct, Lieutenant."

"Oh, You made other deliveries"

Tass said that only yesterday was a Soviet vice-consul permitted to visit Mrs. Kosenkina in the hospital. It added:

"Mrs. Kosenkina is surrounded with police obviously exerting influence and attempting to make declarations claiming they originate from Kosenkina herself."

cent down payment on furniture and rugs.

The time in which complete payment must be made will be held to 15 months, officials predicted. Some merchants have offered two or three year installment plans since the wartime credit control expired last November.

Sales tax, less will be exempt, but the old exemption for purchases of more than $2,000 will be changed to cover prices up to $4,000 — to match the rising cost of such things as automobiles.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer meanwhile urged another line of attack on inflation — cut down grain shipments to the Marshall Plan countries in the next year.

"It may be time to give some attention to the American household," he told a news conference late yesterday.

Nocturnal. A recent survey by a sporting goods firm shows that hunters purchase nearly half of all the equipment sold in sporting goods stores. Just the firearms and ammunition bought the firm totals more than 40 per cent of all the business done by the stores.

Kentucky Kernels

Minority. There are more Kentucky kernels at Hialeah this summer than at the height of winter racing at the Florida track. It is like this. There was considerable quantity of Kentucky corn in the hay taken from stalls for a protected blanket for the racing strip in the off-season. The seed took root, and the Hialeah track has accidentally become a flourishing corn patch.

to his "Mr. Davenport?"

"Yes, I think he became an investment client."

"But you only think that. You don't know what you delivered to him for Mr. Sterling at any time?"

"No, I haven't any idea."

"Talent rubbed his chin. 'When did you see those other deliveries to Mr. Davenport?'"

"Well, they began right after the end of 1940. That first occasion, you remember, was in May, 1940."

"You were sure of that, because Mr. Sterling went into the Marines in December, 1941."

"Yes, I was sure of that. I took an envelope to Mr. Davenport."

"Talent smiled disarmingly before he followed with his next question. 'Miss Wilson, would you recognize Mr. Davenport if you saw him? Were you acquainted made to him personally?'"

"Yes, Lieutenant, invariably to him personally in the lobby of the hotel, and I should know him if I saw him."

"Talent eased back in his chair. 'Miss Wilson, please relax. All this has been enlightening. Now I'm going to ask you to help me.'

Richard Trapgood made no secret of his state of mental turmoil when he entered Talent's office a few minutes after Miss Wilson had gone.

"Chris, I had to see you before another sleepless night," Trapgood said. His eyes were almost wildly pleading and there were deep hollows beneath them. "We just got back from our trip. I let Janet drive on home alone. I had to come here first."

"Sit down, I'm glad you came." Trapgood disengaged the invitation. He leaned forward with his hands on Talent's desk. "I've got to get right to the point, Chris. You've got something on Janet."

"You came over to my office Thursday to talk about it, but ran out on me because Janet was there, because of what happened. But that cigaret she dropped, you took it with you, didn't you? I looked for it. Pete's sake, Chris, that can mean only one thing. You had just come from talking with Sterling at his death."

"Control yourself, Dick. I wanted you to enjoy your weekend."

"Enjoy it? It's been a living hell. Can't you see, Chris, that I've got to have the truth?"

"There's just one question that you'll have to know the truth. Talent said, 'but suppose you wait until we know the whole truth. Now get home to Janet. Dick, have dinner with her. Talk about something else. You may get a call from me tonight. I may ask you to come out ... to bring Janet. Do it my way, won't you, Dick?'"

"Okay, Chris. I guess I'm making a fool of myself."

"Talent got up and walked to the door of his office with Trapgood, gave him a pat of encouragement, and he himself was trying to feel."

Aid to Happiness

A woman once said to me that the first three years of her married life were bitterly unhappy. She and her husband were in a perpetual fight over everything and nothing. Then she suddenly realized that it was just as important for him to be happy as it was for her. And she began struggling for his happiness instead of getting into his hair, and the result was her happy ending.

"And that's the storybook ending," and that's the happy ending over afterwards.

I wonder if this isn't the whole of the law of the prophets about how to make marriage a success. Instead of the prelude to divorce, I wonder if what's the matter with marriage isn't just plain, unadorned, unadorned, instead of the seven deadly sins, instead of all the number of philandering husbands and wives is small, and when we see so many of our friends, whom we know to be people of high principles and who were once married in love when they were young, and who are now divorced, we can't understand how it happens.

Yet perhaps the reason is just as plain as the noses on our faces. It is because both the husband and the wife sought their own particular pleasure. Each wanted the other to be happy and have a perfect blissful time doing the things that he or she personally liked to do. Otherwise no soap.

Deals Teller

Probably every young couple who get married start out with the full determination to be an ideal husband and wife and to do everything they can to make each other happy, and the first rift in the comes when they discover that they haven't the same tastes and habits and that the thing one does on doing, bores the other one to tears.

The wife wants to dress up and step out of evenings. The husband wants to sit at home and rest his feet. The wife likes plain cooking. The husband is an epicure. The wife is extravagant, the husband thrifty. Each is determined to change the other to the way he or she was brought up, and each considers the other a fanatic, or a tyrant, or a tyrant, because he or she will not adapt himself or herself to the other.

So another marriage goes on the rocks. Another home is broken up. Another batch of children are made motherless or fatherless. All because a man or woman considered it more important that he or she should have his or her way than that a home should be kept together.

Theoretically every wife wants her husband to be happy, but the catch in it is that he has to be happy her way. He has to live in the house she picks out. He has to eat the food she sets on the table. He has to give up his friends for her friends. He has to let her rear the children according to her standards. Or else.

And the queer part of it all is that these women, who rule their husbands with a rod of iron, so seldom even give a single thought as to whether they are making their husbands happy or not. Apparently how a husband feels about being made a doormat doesn't concern them. They've got what they wanted and that is all that counts with them.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1947
By King Features Syndicate.

Washington, Aug. 12 — The sensational hearings of the committee investigating pro-American activities erupted in a dramatic scene today when I. Walsh, a surprise witness took the stand and in ringing tones declared: "I have been in the White House ever since March 4, 1933, and I have never heard a single word of criminal pro-American propaganda by anyone connected with the household."

Mr. Walsh described himself as a senior contemplator attached to the Bureau of Semantics and Casuistry of the Executive Survey.

His salary is $12,500 a year. The Bureau of Semantics and Casuistry is a little-known agency existing as a detached offshoot of the Executive Survey in order to draw money from the Geologic Survey's appropriation. It was created without fanfare by executive order of President Roosevelt in 1933.

Mr. Walsh was a "favorable" witness produced by the committee against pro-American activities to refute scandalous charges of sinister patriotism, penetrating the White House and executing a supreme court, which were uttered by George Spelvin, American, a notorious patriot and "American-firer." The hearings, under the Marston-Lawyer criminal patriots law, are in charge of Boris Slupp, the lead-lease inquisitor from Moscow.

"You live in the White House, do you, Mr. Walsh?" Commissar Slupp asked.

"Yes, comrade," the witness replied, "ever since the fourth of March, 1933. I have lived in the White House. I ate there, except sometimes, even for democracy, you just couldn't stand any more of the chicken salad. So sometimes I went down to the Ritz for a good juicy steak of roast beef. I slept in the White House except sometimes I slept at Hyde Park or Yalta or Teheran."

"Where were you born, comrade Walsh?"

"Bogotá, Colombia," the witness retorted.

"At all?" Commissar Slupp continued. "I merely intend to show that mankind is a great brotherhood to be united in freedom under Marx and Lenin. Answer, where were you born, Comrade Walsh?"

"I was born in Slopeva, Bessarabia, in 1898," the witness said. "My name in Bessarabia is Ivan Woopinkoff, a very old family in Slopeva. We are the Bessarabian branch of the Irish family, which you can find even in Ireland. So when I landed in Boston, I gradually adopted the Irish form of Woopinkoff, which is Walsh. So I am Ivan Walsh. But I did not change my name, Comrade Commissar. It is still Woopinkoff pronounced the Irish way."

"And when you landed in Boston —?" Commissar Slupp continued.

"I naturally went to Harvard law school," Mr. Walsh answered. "So naturally I joined all the progressive movements. I joined the Free Tom Money and the I. W. W. and the Lawyers Guild and the non-sectarian Anti-Nazi League and the league against war and fascism."

"While you were at Harvard law school you naturally met the illustrious professor Wennie of Vienna."

"You're telling me," the witness exclaimed. "Wennie and Law, and Dave Niles too, except like me, Dave adopted the Irish version of his name which in the first place was Neoyhaus. Sure, I met Wennie! How else do you think I could get a job in the government to work for democracy under freedom after the collapse of decadent western, parasitic capitalism? You've got to have a diploma from Harvard law school, like Albi Pressman and all the boys. We got a big alumni here in Washington. When we meet to upla for more and more democracy, we give a good substantial yell for Harvard law school."

"Your personal record indicates that you are an admiral of the United States Navy, retired," Commissar Slupp said. "Were you engaged in the first world war?"

"No," Mr. Walsh said. "That was an imperialist war for the czar and the Kaiser and war street. I was exempt as an ally because I was Bessarabian. But I read Wennie! How else do you think I could get a job in the government to work for democracy under freedom after the collapse of decadent western, parasitic capitalism? You've got to have a diploma from Harvard law school, like Albi Pressman and all the boys. We got a big alumni here in Washington. When we meet to upla for more and more democracy, we give a good substantial yell for Harvard law school."

"I came to Washington in the fall of 1932 and on March 4, 1933, I got my first job for democracy in the Department of Labor. I began as junior ideologist, under civil service detailed to the White House. I became soon a second-class eunuch."

Bathers Edge Closer to Clarksdale

The Associated Press

The Hot Springs Bathers inched up to within one game of the second place Clarksdale Planters in the Cotton States League last night.

The Bathers handed Pine Bluff an 8-2 defeat while the Planters scheduled to play at Helena, were idle because of wet grounds.

The El Dorado Oilers swept a double header from the Natchez Indians 6-3 and 2-1 to climb out of the cellar by one percentage point. Pine Bluff now holds the bottom rung in the loop.

Greenville, scheduled to play at Greenwood, was idled by wet grounds.

Hot Springs won its game as Dick Strals turned in a strange pitching performance. He allowed 10 hits but scattered them so well the Cards were able to score on only two of them—each a homer. The Cards were hit by Christy and Kirke.

At El Dorado, Natchez missed a chance to win in the first game when Parks fanned with the bases loaded. In the second game Manager Howard Roberts drove in the winning run for the Oilers with a sixth inning double.

Saturday's Schedule:

Hot Springs at Greenwood, Pine Bluff at Greenville, Helena at Natchez, Clarksdale at El Dorado.

Merchants End Season With Double Victory

The hard hitting Hope Merchants behind the no-hit pitching of Roy Taylor and the 2-hit pitching of Matt Ferguson ended 21 hits in two games to soundly trounce the previously undefeated Malco Flyers of Hot Springs (12-4) (12-0) here last night, and ended the softball season with 20 wins and 8 losses.

Approximately 2000 fans saw the Hope boys outclass the Flyers in every department especially in hitting and pitching.

Roy Taylor struck out 8 men in his five inning no hitter and Matt Ferguson struck out 4 allowing 2 hits. Both games were called at the fifth inning with Hope way out in front.

Leading hitters for Hope were Taylor with 4 for 6, Gilson Ross with 3 for 3 including a homer. Sedgwick Bell, 2 for 7, Matt Ferguson, 2 for 2 for 7, and Ross 3 for 6. Foy Hammons 2 for 4, and Buddy White with 3 for 4.

Plans are underway to have a feed for the players and their wives in order that the people of Hope can show their appreciation for the fine way in which the boys have represented the Merchants of Hope during this softball season.

Bob White, manager of the Hope Independents Baseball team announced that the team will journey to Murfreesboro this Sunday for a game with the Murfreesboro team at Walters Garage at 12:15 to leave from there.

Memphis, Vols Play for First Spot Tonight

Little Rock, Aug. 14 — (AP) — One big inning proved that the Little Rock outcasts, last year's state champions and national runners-up, still are the team to beat in Arkansas American Legion Junior baseball.

Little Rock came close to stumbling last night, but exploded for eight runs in the top of the ninth inning to subdue its arch-rival, the Fort Smith victors, 13 to 9.

add insult to injury, the Doughboys staged their spree — on six hits and three walks — against the Little Rock mound staff.

Bill Stanley.

Fort Smith, Camden and Marion West Memphis, each once-beaten were to battle today and tonight to stay in the journey and meet in the finals Sunday.

A second heating knocks a team out of the running.

Pine Bluff became the first team to be eliminated from the meet, which began Thursday. Pine Bluff lost before Fort Smith, 10-9, yesterday.

Fort Smith and Camden, the Jefferson countians were polished off by Camden 14-3, last night.

Fort Smith and Marion-West Memphis were to square off this afternoon, with the winner to meet Camden tonight.

"You kept alert, I suppose, to detect any pro-American symptoms or criminal patriotism in the navy?" Commissar Slupp said.

"I didn't go around with the navy people," Mr. Walsh said. "Four or five times I was arrested because the shore patrol thought I was wearing an Admiralty's seal for a misquadrade. They wouldn't believe I was an American until the night I showed up in the brig with a lot of pro-Americans and from what I judge conditions were very bad. Patriotism was rampant, but you have to be elastic with people. After all, they didn't have the advantages of Harvard law school. It wasn't like that in the White House though. The White House was absolutely clean."

The hearings will continue to-morrow.

Sports Roundup

By Hugh C. Fullerton, Jr.

France and mentioned her country's golfing "cadets." The French mispronounced the word and came up with "caddy."

Mary, Queen of Scots, was probably the world's first woman golfer. Before her era though, golf had a rocky start. The game was outlawed in the 14th century because it threatened national defense. The king said men should be out practicing archery.

Later James IV of Scotland was persuaded to play a round. He missed the ball completely on several shots, his pride was nicked, and the next day he was out for another try. Before he died James developed into a fair duffer and the game seldom suffered at the hands of law.

The name links is incorrect for a golf course unless it is near the seaside. Links land is usually the name of a sandy, grassy, seaside area in Scotland where the first courses were laid out.

The niblick, or nine-iron, is the grandchild of a club once called a "buck iron." Early golf courses often doubled as cow pastures and there were practically no restrictions about driving a horse and wagon across fairways and greens. The "track iron" was developed to get the ball out of the many ruts. The earliest such clubs had small faces but would loft a ball sharply.

The first national public links tournament in Toledo, Ohio, in 1822, got off to a disastrous start. Two players made their second shots near the finish of a round. A pistol shot rang out. One of the gallery had picked that moment to commit suicide.
